T was a pleasing surprise, the announce ment that Amy Ricard is to play Unida in The Master Builder. Pleasing because all whose heart fluids have not turned to gall rejoice when to a clever and ambitious ung woman like Amy the gate of opporyoung woman like Amy the gate of oppor-tunity swings wide. Any young actress who has been called upon to play the leading fe-male character in an Ibsen play may be reasonably sure that her "chance" has come. A surprise, because we had unthinkingly, per-haps, associated Miss Ricard with bubbling, tomboy parts. We accepted her warmly as oy parts. We accepted her warmly as hampagne-like American girl in The Stubthe champagne-like American girl in The Stub-bornness of Geraldine, and we welcomed her as an athletic girl in The College Widow, al-though we would have preferred to hear her speak more lines, for her readings are always intelligent and vivacious. We shall wait in a mood of friendly receptivity to see what she will do with the heroine of that symbolic play The Master Builder, a role which the author styled "a reversed Hedda Gabler."

Hilda is the third in a drame of the down.

rele Master Builder, a role which the author tyled "a reversed Hedda Gabier."

Hilda is the third in a drama of the domeste triangle; strangely different, however, from the Gallic triangular play. She brings into the household of Halvard Solness, a genius of milders, grown morbid, suspicious, discourged, half mad, sunshine and the tonic of sea fir. She plays in his life the role of a mardian angel. She represents to Aline, the milder's neglected, unhappy wife, the kindless which the saddened woman believed had added from the world. She sends away a soung woman who was fast evolving into the wil genius of the family. She persuades Solvins to write a letter of praise for Knut, a coung architect whom he fears and hates because he believes that the young man will neceed to his own fame in that art which has been called "frozen music."

Haying performed the triumphant service.

Having performed the triumphant service of clearing the atmosphere of his home, and suching him that hardest of all lessons, foresees, Hilds becomes, to the eye of average leceroment, no longer the good angel of a nan's life. She turns, to this average eye, himsical, merely a woman. But the master thy wright is gathering his forces for a mag-

She recalls this promise. She tells him that she has dreamed of seeing him mount to the highest turnet of another church of his building. Will be fulfill for her this dream?

Solness hesitates. He is older. He is no lengur fearless. He has lost the andacious self-confidence of youth. He has no desire to build more churches. Dwellings for human beings, he argues, are of far more use to the world than splendid shelters for outworn tenets of half-forgotten faiths. He hints that in some castle of Spain he might find happiness with her. But she lends to this fancy no smile of encouragement.

Mabel Taliaferro as the fairy child in The Land of Heart's Desire was exquisite. It was the best work of her career, which is bounded, I am told by eighteen years. In her winsome personality the elfish, eerie note is dominant. By some managerial mischance she was not at the last permitted to play Sara Crewe in Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's Little Princess, a role to which she was by nature admirably fitted. Hannele would provide greater depths, furnish a more poignant key.

There is by way of frame for the first picture of Hannele a crowd of paupers quarrel-ing in an almshouse. A wee shivering wisp of humanity with woful eyes is dragged into the group. She shrinks from the wretched sight and whimpers with white lips, "I'm afraid." The inmates of the almshouse hear that the child had been arrested for an at-tempt at suicide. The magistrate and a teacher question her, to little purpose. The brain, benumbed by fear as the body by blows and bruises, keeps its secret. Her pinched face, hunger drawn, her shrunken body, rag covered and dripping from the waters of the icy pond, her animal terror of a lifted hand, tell it only in part. The rest is read in the hectic light of the child's subsequent delirium.

Hot bricks and hot drinks and the fancy that she is alone loosens the locked tongue. She mumbles that the Lord beckoned her to follow Him into the dark pond. She screams at sight of a coat and hat hanging at the foot of the bed. The old coat and hat assume a more definite form. The girl shudders and cries. The form moves nearer. Hannels cries. The form moves nearer. Hannele writhes in agony. She springs from the bed and runs to a corner where she swoons from fright. Sister Martha lifts her in her arms and carries her back to the bed.

The raven wing of delirium throws the child again into the shadow. The spirit of her mother appears and recounts the tragedy of her own life and death. Her body, the daughter knew, was a mass of bruises when they laid it in the coffin. Before the mother fades into the night and nothingness she leaves on the child's breast a flower which she tells her shall be the sesume to a great and lasting joy. Almost happy now the child prattles of flowers and her dreams of angels.

From dreams of angels she passes into a flowers and her dreams of angels.

From dreams of angels she passes into a vision of the village tailor, who brings her a long, shining white garment and golden slippers, saluting her as Princess Hannele. The village children enter and with sobs and tears beg her pardon for having saluted her as Princess Ragtag. The sobs of the children cease and their parents enter bearing a crystal coffin. Hannele, knowing it is hera, greets the shining thing with joy.

Mattern, the stepfather, assist becomes a Mattern, the stepfather, again becomes a terrible shape, he are tevered dreams. He slouches in and looks about him, calling with loud curses for Hannele. The girl trembles in her crystal coffin. The neighbors gather about to hide it from the infuriated man. A stranger of commanding appearance and quiet manner is seen advancing to speak to the angry man. No one has seen this stranger enter. No one knows who he is. But there is that in his tone and face that frightess the coward Mattern. Denying that he had ever cruelly treated his stepchild, Mattern rushes out of the house to hang himself. Then the stranger walks to the side of the crystal coffin. The neighbors fall back in awe before him. Hannele sees that he wears a shining robe of white and that about his forehead there is a glow of starlight. He whispers to her to rise. She obeys.

A sudden shifting of scene and we are looking at the little room in the almshouse, where Sister Martha and the doctor are stooping above a shrunken figure in mean rags in a squalid bed.

To go to Dreamland, Coney Island, without seeing "Creation" is like seeing Shylock without that castle.

"Not if I mount hand in hand with you," a urgus. But selfhood, non-existent for the ime in Hilda, does not betray her from her nission.

"I would see you stand, free and high, lims," is her answer.

would not have done else, climbs the hights at a woman's will.

Hilds sees him climb to the turret, sees him pause and look down, and in her ecstary she cheers. At the sound he starts, struggles and falls, but she does not seem to see.

"My master builder!"

Hilda's cry of triumph rings out as the curtain slowly falls. The master builder has kept fish promise. She is a fairy princess, who saved him from madness. And for the fairy story he had paid the price of death.

Why not, Liebler and Company, dear sira, with in your schedule of special productions with in your schedule of special productions for the season of 1905-6, "Hannele—Mabel Talisferre"? Nella Webb is one of the actresses who within the memory of the Matinee Girl has graduated from a name in one of the large groups that appear beneath the programme proper, glorified extras, to the point where one is sure to see the same name in fat-black letters somewhere about the middle of the programme, indicating a good part. Moreover, we see the name every season. There over we see the name every season. There would seem to be no periods of dry rot or rust with Nella Webb, and it is almost always in conjunction with a good cast in a season suc-Miss Webb has energy and the determination to develop such talent as she possesses. He has submitted tempting offers to a dosen prominent stars, but in nearly every case the matter of a daily matines has served as the stumbling block acceptance of the signing of contracts. It may safely be predicted, nevertheless, that the Fifth Avenue stock company for 1905-6 will safely be predicted, nevertheless, that the Fifth Avenue stock company for 1905-6 will be a very strong organisation, with a famous leading man and leading woman at its head; that during the season several new plays will have their first performance on any stage there; that a great many favorite pieces will also be produced during the season, and that especial attention will be paid to the costuming and mounting of all the productions.

A Zola Play Produced—La Belle Marselliaise
—Racine's Esther Revived.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

PARIA, June 30.

Couching example of devotion and lovalty friend, no longer among the living, was shed by the playbill at the Opéra Comique meing L'Enfant Roi (The Child King), to by Emile Zola, music by M. A. BruAccustomed as we have been to see meati. Accustomed as we have been to see these two names linked together, it was natural to suppose that the death of Zola would have dissolved the partnership. Not so. It appears that before his death the famous suther placed in the hands of his friend Bruneau several libretti, and the latter, looking upon this act of friendship as a sacred trust, has announced his intention of setting to music everything that Zola bequeathed to him. While this way of reasoning does great credit to M. Bruneau's conception of friendship, it will hardly redound to his advantage, as the measer success in the past of works by Zola meager success in the past of works by Zola and Bruneau has fully demonstrated. It is not the music but the libretto which was at fault in every instance, and it is to be deplored that M. Bruneau's infatuation prevents him from seeking another collaborator and us securing the success which he deserves. In L'Enfant Roi the subject chosen is of the tritest. M. Delagrange, a prosperous baker and confectioner, is in despair that the union of himself and wife has not been blesse with children. One day he receives an anonymons note acquainting him that there is some thing wrong with his wife. He rushes to the place designated, where he expects to surprise her with a lover, and, instead of that, finds her lavishing caresses on a half-grown youth, who it develops is her son, the fruit of a liason with a military man prior to her marriage to Delagrange. In order to conceal his existence the child has been brought up by his grand-mother, in whose little shop the mother has been in the habit of visiting him. As might be expected the honest baker flies into a rage upon learning this "piquant" family history and gives his wife the choice between himself and her son. She chooses the latter and Dela-grange returns to his bakery, where, probably influenced by his dejected spirita, everything begins to go wrong. But the love which the wife bears her husband causes her to return to him before long and at once business picks up again. Seeing that he is the bone of conon the youth decides to sacrifice himself and leave the country. He calls on his mother to bid her goodbye, when the good baker, overwhelmed by emotion, decides to adopt him, and the child proves victorious, "king," as the title denote

While the sentiment of the play is to b approved, the fact that the most commonplace "bourgois" surroundings had been chosen for its enactment, and the very meager action of the play itself, which had to be eked out by a multitude of accessories, should have deterred M. Bruneau from wasting his talents upon ch poor material. M. Dufranne as the baker, Mile. Friché in the role of the wife, and Marie Thiêry as the

on did all in their power to secure success.

At the Ambigu-Comique La Belle Marseillaise, by M. P. Berton, presented a series mificent stage settings of the time of on I. The play is interesting from beginning to end, full of action, amusing and touching at the same time—in short, a treat to witness, to which fact overflowing audi-ences bore testimony.

without saying that a play whose plot is laid in the times of the First Empire presents unbounded opportunities for the pic-turesque in the costumes of both sezes, so that the stage pictures which met our view were both fascinating and beautiful.

La Belle Marseillaise is the name of an inn a young aide-de-camp and favorite of Napo-leon, Colonel Crissenay, falls desperately in love with the charming Madame Lacaussade. The latter appears pleased with his attentions, but cannot be prevailed upon to admit that she loves the gallant young officer, remaining to all appearances loyal to her husband, de-spite the fact that the latter is about forty wars older than she.

It soon develops that the venerable inn-beeper is in reality a Marquis de Tallemont, a royalist body and soul, who is planning the annihilation of Napoleon. The opportune mo-ment has arrived. That very night a bomb is to be hurled at the carriage of the First Con-sul, and the Marquis is giving final instruc-tions to his tool, Saint-Réjant, with whom, for the purpose of diverting the attention of the polica, who are "onto" Saint-Réjant, he ex-changes clothes.

The young Marquine—to give her her proper title—has overheard this conversation and trumbles at the thought that the life of Cris-trumbles at the thought that the life of Crissenay, whom she loves devotedly, is in danger, as he will be among those escorting Napoleon at the moment when the bomb is to be thrown. or to save the man she loves and to im forget the call of duty she uses all was of fascination to retain him at her her powers of fascination to retain him at her side until a terrible explosion is heard in the street, proving that the fatal moment has passed. But Napoleon has escaped unburt and the multitude is wildly cheering him, while a dreadfully mutilated body is being brought into the inn, as, on account of the clothing it is supposed to be all that is left of Lecaussed. At the sight of it the poor wife fails on her brown sobbing, but the Marquis, film on her brown sobbing, but the Marquis, after the Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the magnet after its Leaden run is ended, and the to betray his secret. Disguised as Saint-Réjant he manages to escape, with the avowed intention to revenge the death of his friend.

Intention to revenge the death of his friend.

The next act takes place in the salon of Josephine at the Tuileries, where we meet with an assemblage of famous historical personages, such as Junot, Murat, Cambarérès, Fouché, Madame de Rémusat, Hortense the daughter of Josephine, and Napoleon's beautiful young sister Pauline, forming a most interesting group. Napoleon proposes to make teresting group. Napoleon proposes to make a match between his aide-de-camp Crissenay and a rich heiress, but the young officer re-mains true to his first love, declaring that his heart is in the keeping of Widow Lacaussade, the Belle Marseillaise. The Consul interviews the woman of whose charms he has heard so much and plies her with questions as to why she refuses to marry Crissenay. As she can give no valid reasons, Napoleon, not accus-tomed to see his wishes disregarded, orders the marriage to take place at once.

In the third act the poor little Marquise confides to Crissenay the terrible secret of having a husband still living and of the double life which he has forced her to-lead. Crissenay is generous enough not to divulge her con-fidence and in the end is rewarded, for although the Marquis de Tallemont reappears and makes another attempt upon the life of Napoleon by means of a poisoned snuff box, which scheme the presence of mind of his wife causes to miscarry, all eventually ends well. The Marquis loses his life in a duel, leaving Crissenay to enjoy the happiness of poss ing a wife whom he adores.

The Belle Marseillaise was charmingly impersonated by Maud Arny, while the role of the gallant colonel was ably sustained by André Brièle. Mademoiselle Béryl as Josephine acted with dignity and grace.

It was a very gracious act on the part of Eleonora Duse to give a performance for the benefit of our beloved Madame Crosnier, who graced the French stage for a period of fifty seven years, retiring some years ago at the advanced age of seventy-one years. Surely a record to be proud of. Not only was she beloved and admired as a true artiste, but her private character was of such sterling integrity and uprightness that she commanded uni-

dozen performances, when Taps was reinstated again and drew crowded houses.

At the Théatre Sarah-Bernhardt, Racine's tragedy Esther was given in its original form, enacted by the pupils of the convent before King Louis XIV and a selected few belonging to his court.

It is a matter of historical record that Madame de Maintenont requested Racine to write a tragedy, "simple, innocent and touch-ing," all roles to be performed by young girls, pupils of the convent of St. Cyr, in whose welfare she took a vivid personal interest. As a result Esther was written. King Louis took great interest in the performance, making out the list of invitations himself and super-vising the seating of the pupils in their severe uniform upon the benches reserved for them. Sarah Bernhardt, who is nothing if not unique, took the part of King Ahasuerus, wearing a magnificent crown of many jewels. The accompanying music, written by Raynaldo Hann, was very pleasing. Altogether the performance was noteworthy for its originality.

It is said that negotiations are pending be tween the Society of Authors and the theatre managers to adjust amicably the differences which caused the famous lawsuit between the two factions. At any rate the managers have decided not to appeal the case and the authors are said to be in a conciliatory frame of mind. Let us hope that they will do away with some abuses they have been guilty of. What other name can be given to their practice of extorting royalties from managers who produce plays by Molière? This attempt on their part to claim Molière, who has been dead a few centuries, as a member of their club is, to say the least, sublimely ridiculous. Besides, it works a hardship on theatre managers, many of whon have to hustle to make ends meet.

The efforts her friends had made in her behalf some years ago were not as successful as they deserved to be, and it remained for Duse—great in charity as in art-to give substantial relief to one so eminently entitled to it.

Orphée and Eurydice, Gluck's masterpiece so full of pathos and exquisite tenderness that the music seems to penetrate one's very soul, was beautifully sung at the Opéra Comique. Madame Rose Caron as Orphée and Madame Vallandri as timid Eurydice were great in their respective parts. Still it is to be regretted that the role which Gluck had written for a tenor voice should be sung by a soprano, thus sacrificing the beautiful contrast between the male and female voices.

At the Comédie Française we enjoyed a charming one act play written in verse, Il était une Bergére (There Was Once a Shepherdess), by André Renoire, whose success will be hailed with pleasure by the society lately formed among the playwrights for the encouragement of this style of composition. Such men as Catulle Mendés, Francis de Croisset, Jacques Richepin, etc., are among its members.

HARRISON GREY TITEL'S FLAR.

Harrison Grey Flake has ancounced his plans for the coming set on at the Manhattan Theatre, which will open early 't September with a production by but of a second and John. The this of this one with is named for its leading characters, 2 young married couple, and thus may stand typically for the average young pair who have entered matrimony, is somewhat homely, but the play is said to be a work a uncommon promise, both accurace it is highly amusing along unbackne, or lines, and for its related characters, which tonity many to be found in metropolitan life to day. Moreover, it is said to have what is not useful with a play objec-tively comic, a theme of moment that brings into its complications the galle or posed mental viewpoints of the average young man and woman of to-day who ventue; into matrimony. The leading members of what is promised to be an exceptionally capable comedy company have already been engaged for this production, and the cast will be completed upon Mr.

Piske's return from Europe.

After the run of Mary and John at the Manhattan, Madame Bertha Kalich will begin her engagement under Mr. Fiske's direction in an elaborate production of Maeterlinck's Monna Vanna, a company of the first class being associated with her for this event.

Mrs. Fiske in October will begin an Autumn tour with the Manhattan company in Leah Kleschna, visiting cities in which that play has not been seen. Then Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan company will begin at the Manhattan their annual season, filling out the rest of the dramatic year. The first production will be a new play by Rupert Hughes, en-titled What Will People Say? This is a comedy of contemporary New York life, affording an excellent modern character study for Mrs. Fiske, as well as what are believed to be adequate roles for her distinguished associates, including John Mason, George Arliss, Frederic de Belleville, William B. Mack and others. eric de Belleville, William B. Mack and others. What Will People Say? according to the plans as they now stand, will be followed by a revival of a standard comedy which has not been seen in New York in several years, and in which Mrs. Fiske never has appeared. In due sequence Mr. Langdon Mitchell's new comedy of local interest will be produced, and a new one-act play by John Luther Long. Ibsen's Rosmersholm, with Mrs. Fiske in the character of Rebecca West, is another possibility—awaiting events already settled—and bility—awaiting events already settled—and Mr. Fiske has in contemplation, as soon as may be, a revival of Tess of the D'Urbervillea, which is designed to surpass in every respetthe original production of this play from Hardy's novel.

Mr. Fiske sailed for Europe last Thursday. He will go directly to Paris, and during his absence will visit Switzerland and Italy.

Colley Cibber, Influenced by Claret Lemonade. Tells Him Some Anecdotes.

I walked down Broadway yesterday jangling my keys in my pocket, making believe they were money, and when I came to the right corner I turned toward William's for something cooling-on tick-and sympathy. There is always something cool at William's except in winter, and generally there is sym-

"Mr. Cibber's in the back room, sir," repeated William, "drinking claret lemonade."

Now, it wasn't unusual to find Colley at William's, but Colley and claret lemonade were an unheard of combination, so I took the cooling drink that William gave me, and went into the back room casually, as though I expected to have it all to myself. enough, there was Colley sitting at the little table with the bad leg under the musket of 76 and the print of Boston Common that

In the Prospect Street Cametery, Januales, Long Island, James H. Hackett, of Faistaffian memory, and his wife, Catherine Lessugg Hackett, are buried.

In the Lutheran Cemetery, Middle Village, Long Island, Minnie Schults Huber, the once popular songstress, lies at rest.

At the United States Crematory, Fresh Pond, Long Island, are kept the ashes of Alice Harrison and Anton Seidl.

In the larger cemeteries, two of which are consecrated to those of Roman Catholic persuasion, "Holy Cross" and "Calvary," several well-known actors and performers are buried.

In Holy Cross Cametery, at Fintbush, Long Island, rest the remains of Rachel Deuville, whose fame has not yet been obliterated by the reputation of more modern favorites. Here sine are buried the great "Ricarde," Archie Hughes, a minutrel of great reputation in his day, and William Henry (Harry) Kennedy, a good ventriloquist in his time, but who wen wifer fame by his many sweet songs to the six of one of which, "Say Au Revoir, But Not Good-By," he was laid away in the bosom of the earth. About a mile inland from Hastings on the Hudson lies Mount Hope Cometery, a very pretty rural borying ground on the line of the New York and Putnam Railroad. It is in this beautiful and peaceful village of the dead that the gitted dramatist, stage director, and actor Dion Roucleault lies at rest.

Off from the more settled section of the cametery on the top of a hill that commands view of the country for miles around the Booticault plot is marked by four small corner posts. In the centre of the lot in a grave will in the solid rock this brilliant frishman is buried. The grave is covered by a massive side of Sectch granits, in the centre of which is a bronze tablet bearing this inscription:

The Lady of Lyons was the offering of the Perris Stock co. at the Lyceum week June 28, being given with the full strength of the co. and received good patronage. Week 2 Why Smith Left Home kept large houses in a continual uproar. Lewis S. Stone was seen in the name part and managed to get about all the comedy possible from the role. This he did in a quiet way, never resorting to anything that was not dignified and in keeping with the character. Eva Taylor was Mrs. Smith and gave a good performance. Lawrence Grattan was somewhat unsuited to the part of Count von Guggenheim, but withal did very good work. Lelia Shaw was a very clever Julia. Eate Woods Piske made a personal hit as Lavinia Daler. Ernest Fisher as General Billetdeaux and Leelle Moresce as Robert Walton deserve special mention. The balance of the cast handled their parts satisfactority. The Ensign in rehearsal. Dorothy Verson of Haddon Hall will follow.

Dick Ferris has returned to the city after an absence in New York on business connected with his road attractions.

The event of the week of July 2-8, witnessed by large crowds nightly, was the pyrotechnic display on the lake at Fairmount Park. The Leucx Amusement Co. furnished the attraction, which was a very clever miniature production of the battle of Manila. The fleworks were well handled and proved a most interesting evening's entertainment. The Fourth of July brought the largest crowd of the season to the park and the many concessions did an excellent business. Ellery's Royal Italian Band began their second week at Electric Park 2, playing to the same big crowds that marked the first week of their engagement. Vaudeville in the German Village and a fireworks display in the electric fountain sine won much favor. Forest Park also drew its full quots the week of 2-8, the Fourth being an especially eventful day on account of the immense crowds. Eing and Queen, the diving horses, have been retained for the second week and with a spectacular fireworks display were the features of the week. Leage's Band, the Hungarian Band, and Smith's Ladies' Orchestra furnished a variety of music.

Hagenbeck's Trained Animal Circus scored a most decided hit here 2-4, giving two performances on the first day and three on the day following, all to large crowds.

Mesara. Koib and Dill in I. O. U. at the Marquam Grand for the week of June 28 made a palpable bit in the same kind of work and characterization which failed at the Baker Theatre a year ago. In a pure Weberfield act, with vandeville trimmings threwn in they crowded the Marquam for the first time in three months, and made so good there is no reason to believe that their season of two weeks will abate in messey winning. The Beauty Shep commences 2.

OFFENSIVE AND EXCESSIVE PERSP

In the Summer time excessive perspiration discolors and often completely ruins thousands of dainty gowns. A complete remedy, however, for this aggravating trouble is now supplied by the CASSEL CHEMICAL CO., of Germany, which has opened a New York office, and is offering the famous Cased Toilet Lotion to the public.

CASSEL TOILET LOTION absorbs all excessive perspiration and renders the residue colories and odorless.

CASSEL TOILET LOTION does not shield but removes all odor of perspirate pleasantly and thoroughly, and is delightfully cooling and refreshing.

From the first application the most filmy white dresses may be worn with never an outwastrace of moisture or discoloration.

European physicians commend it highly.

Parisian gown makers declare it a boon to women.

ROCHESTER.—NATIONAL THEATER (Max Hurtig, mgr.): Frederick Paulding's new melodrama, Trooper Billio, was the attraction week 3-6, and as interpreted by the stock co. proved a decided success, and good houses ruised at each performance. The action of the play is centered around a Western frontier post and a military atmosphere permeates the play throughout; an interesting love story is injurewoven, and thrilling incidents and realistic climaxes make the play one of the best of the kind that has been presented here in many a day. Jessie Bonstelle was simply "it" in the character she amounded and she was ably suntained by Frederick Lewia, Mr. Kirby, Mr. Eric, and Mins Harden. We predict a warm reception for Trooper Billie wherever presented. Trilby week 10-15.—COOK'S OPERA HOUSE (J. H. Moore, mgr.; W. R. THE LONDON STAGE

pershardt as Adrienne Lecouvrier.

It is perhaps not a strikingly original remark to make, but still I will make it. And this remark is that to-day is Midsummer Day.

Now, this means a lot to the inhabitants of Britain's Isle, because it means in the first and most important point to them that, if they happen to be householders, another three months' rent is due. But still more importantly, for the purpose of this epistle, the advent of Midsummer Day portends the beginning, or even the middle, of the end of the

Now this said theatrical season has been ad enough-for failures have been more than merous enough—but to tell you the abso-te, simple, unadulterated truth, things have an made much worse for theatrical manents this week by reason of a sudden deluge furnace-like snap which has ad all the well-to-do folk to amble either our glorious river Thames, or to Ascot, ere the annual horse-races have, even more an is usually the case, drawn such fine ates" that they have prevented the theatres of halls having decent "houses." Apart from a general hot weather of the period, Ascot draws so many hundreds of real swells, quands of would-be ditto, because yalty always goes and gives a grand pro-

Certain of our French visitors, especially Mesdames Bernhardt and Rejane, have done fine business at the Coronet and Terry's re-spectively, and the two-hundred-and-fifty-nightold play, The Walls of Jericho, at the Garrick George Edwardes' new rollicking Spring Chicken at the Gaiety; the year-old musical mixture, The Catch of the Senson, at the Vaudeville; Collier and company in The Dictator at The Comedy and The Man of the Moment at the St. James are all doing excellent busi-With the exception, perhaps, of Busi-Is Business at His Majesty's (with Beerbohm's tremendous performance of a sort of millionaire "Trust" merchant), I cannot (slas!) find any other places doing much od financially.

What I do find is that several theatres and even music halls, are closing. Six of the suburban playhouses have put up their shut-ters till the August Bank Holiday. Even that gorgeous, grand and long-popular resort, the Empire, closes to-night till September, nsibly for "structural alterations," and the New Lyceum Theatre of Varieties will do ditto next week after trying two houses a light at East-end prices, and then one houselight at half the West-end sort. night at E

The whole fact of the matter is that there are now far too many theatres and music around, even for this mighty metrop Moreover, the big theatrical managers oines and music-hall syndicates (a kind of "Trusts") corner all the best entertainers and bar them from appearing anywhere within quite a number of miles from their own places months before they want those

The one big West-end production of the was Sarah Bernhardt's revival of Victor Hugo's seventy-year-old romantic drama Angelo; the Tyrant of Padua, a prose play which, in its day, caused a sensation among the devotees of the old formal, pompous, poetic French drama of Messieurs Corneille Racine et Cie. Hugo's method seemed startlingly newfashioned then; nowadays it seems ancient and almost fossilized, especially when devoid of his noble outbursts of vivid verse. Still Angelo, etc., affords La Bernhardt fine scope for powerful and contrasted—nay, even hysteric—histrionics. She impersonates La Tisbe, wayward but, for the most part, well-meanurtesan, who contrives to foil the wife Ill-treating and would-be wife-murdering tyrant Angelo in many of his most criminal hinations. Of course, La Tisbe has a big death scene of her own, else the part would e to S

As to La Rejane, I have only to report that this week she has repeated her fine imsonation of Madame Sans Gene, and that at week she will revive La Passerelle, which original of the Marie Tempest comedy, The Marriage of Kitty. By the way, the merry Marie has returned safe and sound to these shores; so have Albert Chevalier and Charles Hawtrey. The cheery Charles re-ceived the warmest of welcomes in making don re-appearance last Monday at the evenue in my old friend "Dick" Ganthony's e altruistic comedy A Message from Mars.

Just to give you a few more or less during this sultry map, I will vouchsafe unto you a few details of the latest dramatization of the Rev. Baring Gould's Essex coast smug-gler romance entitled Mehalah. This new adaptation was viewed by me a few nights ago at Croydon, one of the most ancient but so one of the most up-to-date towns in all ee volcano-born islands. You must know, then (as they say in the old story books), that Mehalah is a strongwilled, gipsy-blooded heroine who loves a smart young sailor-lad, but is herself yearned for by a rich local landowner and secret smuggler, named Elijah Rebow. Now, Elijah is a nan of iron impulse and he vows to bend Mehalah to his will, or to break her in the atempt. He starts by trying to blow her sailor er's brains out in the marshes. Failing in this, he has the lad captured by a press-gang and taken thousands of miles away, causing Mehalah to think that that bold young tar is drowned. Next Elijah steals poor Mehalah's rent, due for his cottage (in which she and er dwell) in order to reduce them to beggary, and to bring them to his big feet. Finding this plan fail, too, he sets fire to this cottage of his to burn Mehalah out. Then he carries her to his own Red Hall and keep her a prisoner. Anon he causes it to be thought that she has by this time become "no better than she ought to be," as the old English locution has it. Eventually, driven to desperation, Mehalah, in order to save her reputation, agrees to marry him on condition that she is his wife "in name only." Elijah agrees to this strange nuptial contract, but later, on Mehalah showing, on her wedding day, a desire to absquatulate, he starts to carry her off to his private apartments. She fights him furiously, and in the struggle snatches from the wedding breakfast table a bottle and bashes him with it. She thinks that bottle contains mere wine, whereas it is full of vitriol, with which Elijah has been cleaning his gun to use upon her if necessary. Then the smuggler-bridegroom falls blinded for life, with his bride kneeling horror-

In due course she nurses her blind and terribly disfigured husband, but still insists upon remaining his wife "in name only." This clause so enrages him that often he fain would kill her with a coke-hammer which he now carries about. Presently, however, Mehalah's press-ganged sailor lover returns and tells all. whereupon Elijah gropes after him with that hammer, but in his groping he falls over a convenient cliff and is smashed to smithereens! There's a nice gory mixture to com from the still practising clergyman, the Rev. Baring Gould, the author of that noble and universally popular hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," forsooth!

Mehalah was excellently adapted, and it was also powerfully played, especially by E. Matheson Lang, a fine figure of a man, as the smuggler - landlord-murderer-thief-bridegro and by Hutin Britton as Mehalah. In the first adaptation of this story at the old Gaiety, nearly twenty years ago, that now veteran tragedian citizen. Hermann Vezin, M.A. (of Philadelphia. U. S. A.), played the iron-willed smuggler. But that adaptation was not by any means so good nor so well contrasted as the new one. A strong but dramatic concection called A Showman's Life has been successfully produced at the West London, an old-time playhouse, long known as the Marylebone in the Edgware road, not far from where the fateful Tyburn Tree gallows used to stand. This play, apart from sundry sensational incidents of your old Bowery drama type, has several wondrous strong-man feats performed by a kind of Sandowy histrion named George Testo

Dave Belasco having held forth in The Referee, The Evening Standard, The Daily Express, The Daily Mail, etc., strongly against your native-made octopus-like Theatrical Trust, sails for your city next Tuesday with intent to return here in the Fall or next Spring to build a new theatre here for himself and to arrange for the production of Charles Klein's tremendously successful Dave Warfield's play, The Music Master.

The aforesaid Charles Klein and his brother, Hermann Klein, the expert musical critic and professor, are both having a real good time in this city and its environs. Marcus Mayer tells me that he will sail for New York in about a month's time. George B McLellan returned to London last night after sundry Continental trips on behalf of the Messrs. Shubert's Waldorf Theatre business. By the way, I find that, in spite of all sorts of wild reports as to her health, Madame Calvé will come to this beautiful new Waldorf ere long. At this theatre on Wednesday Signor Duse played Odette for the first time in Great Britain.

Beerbohm Tree has decided to produc Comyns Carr's adaptation of Oliver Twist and to play Fagin therein at His Majesty's a fortnight hence. Arthur Bourchier is busily adapting his new French play purchase, Le Duel, for production at the Garrick when The Walls of Jericho shall begin to crumble. That, however, will not be yet awhile. The great and gorgeous pageant play which poet play-wright Louis Napoleon Parker lately wrote and organized for the 1200th anniversary of his native Dorsetshire town, Sherborne, will, I hear, be brought to London anon.

LONDON, July 1.

First of all, I heartily wish you all many happy returns of your Independence Day-meaning next Tuesday. In the next place, I have to confess that just after mailing you last week, so haunted was I by a wonderful description of Manager Charles Frohman in the Evening Standard and St. James' Gazette, published last week. that an hour or so later I felt compelled to burst forth into song. This lyric, which has since been hummed all around—and was being hummed by the brave Belasco as he stepped aboard to sail for America, Hor and Beauty last Tuesday-appeared in last Sunday's Referee. And, in spite of the fact that it may grieve my good friend, Step ke, who seems to have grown quite Trustful of late, I append that song for singing in your States. The ditty is set to the old, old oular tune of "The King of the Cannibal Islands," and it runs:

" WHY WORRY."

(I do not think that Mr. Frohman will be found dragging the drama down. So long as he is the commanding figure in England there will be little need to worry .- " B. L." in the Evening Standard and St. James' Gazette, June 23.

Oh, patrons of the British stage, Old or young, or middle age, Pray, do you know that mighty mage, The commanding figure in England "? Your eagerness ob ! check, 1 pray,

Such wild excitement don't display, And I will show you in this lay The drama's monarch of to-day.
"The not Sir Henry Irving, no!
(Although his status is not low),
Nor is it Tree. No, no, 'tis FroThe "commanding figure in England."

And yet the Standard and St. J.'s Is only right to give this praise, For Charles the Great in many ways Has benefacted England.

Did he not star great Edna May In many a mighty musical play (Such as The School Girl)? didn't he—eh? And he'll have Hicks from Christmas Day! This cute Fromanager seeks to run, And thus for boldness takes the bunanding figure in England."

Tree, Alexander, Robertson, Hare, Bourchier, Harvey, and Irving (père), Waller and Wyndham, no longer dare To work for the drama in England! You have but striven to roise the art Which first began in Thespis' cart, But Charles hath chosen the better part-He goes for dollars, and isn't he smart? "Poor Trust" is dead! was the tradesmeth.

But Rich Trust lives and gets very "chip," To his coming "Hoorah" we'll add Hip, hip For the Frohmanest figure in England!

"Here follows Prose," as Malvolio said concerning the famous Express letter he re-ceived. For lo! I must now eschew the Muse and settle down to solid and sober Gradgrindean fact. Our new plays of the week started with the Stage Society's production at the Royalty for a couple of plays, namely, The New Felicity, written by Painter Alma Tadema's brainy daughter, Laurence, and One Day More, adapted by that brilliant realistic novelist, Joseph Conrad, from his story This play-producing called "To-morrow." society gave three performances of the pieces starting on Sunday night. But most of us toiling, moiling newspaper men, having quite enough playgoing in the week, don't go play-going on the Sabbath, preferring to snatch a few minutes for rest-and refreshment-on that day. So the Monday and Tuesday performances were good enough for us. The New Felicity referred to the name of a book which had been written by the socalled "hero" of the play, a self sufficient prig of the type of the name part in Bernard Shaw's brilliant but elusive comedy, The Philanderer. This New Felicitarian carries on, and pretends to carry on with all sorts of more or less silly members of what George Meredith somewhat unpolitely calls "the in-explicable sex." Also he preaches a sort of expirable sex. Also be preaches a sort of communal socialism, showing that everybody (except, of course, himself—that is so like our Socialists) should share his goods with his and her neighbors. He also writes against marriage as a vulgar convention, advocating what Pinero in his great play, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray, calls "keeping house to-gether." After some few more or less mild, but mostly well-written scenes, this mock so-cial reformer is suddenly checked in his evil designs on a young and unsuspecting girl and is allowed to meet and effusively to caress his delightful five-year-old daughter by a now prosperous music hall star, whom he seduc deserted when she was poor. This ending, instead of having the paltry blackguard kicked all around the sidewalk, formed a decided disappointment to most of the audiencealways, of course, excepting those of the long-haired and nasty-minded kind who revel in this kind of play. The New Felicity was well acted, especially by Lucy Webling and Irene Rooke as two of the women under the glamour of this scoundrel, Charles Lander as the scoundrel himself, and Florence St. John (the best of the bunch) as the brave little music hall star, who since her betrayal and desertion has lavished all the wealth of her love upon her little child

One Day More was a strong little play of a sad and sombre sort written around a semicrazed old captain, who after moaning for the return of his son supposed to have been lost at sen, refuses to recognizes that son when he es return, and throws things at him. gave an absorbing but gloomy half-hour. The st acting in this was provided by Constance Collier and W. Farren, Jr.

On Thursday at the Coronet the great and golden voiced Sarah Bernhardt produced her new adaptation of the life and adventures of actress Adrienne Lecouvreur. It was the play's first performance on any stage, for you must know that Sarah, not being a member of the French Dramatic Authors' Society, is not allowed to produce any plays in her na tive land. When you come to think of it, it seems a bit saucy even for Sarah, player-poet, painter-potter and panther-petter, to dare to alter or to depart from the old-time Adrienne Lecouvreur play, which Scribe and Legouve wrote for the great Rachel, who at wouldn't play it, but anon (in most unhion) changed her mind. It has womanlike far to be confessed though that La Bernhardt has in some respects made a far better and more natural play. If she has done away with the quaint old prompter Michonnet, she in doing o removed much of the conventional and often boring old theatrical business and cackle. Moreover, she has replaced Michonnet by a new character, that of a poor but lovable old Abbé, whom Adrienne's rival, the haughty Duchess of Beef Tea (I mean Bouillon) seek to bribe to poison the actress with some heavily drugged candy, or, rather, pastilles. Also La Sarah has cut out the chattering Abbé Choiseul and given us instead, as a sort of skeptical, but otherwise sane, character of Voltaire, who was, you will remember, one of poor Adrienne's many lovers. The other chief new business shows a fine scene with the poor Abbé in the Bastille, a great outburst for

Adrienne, when she has visions of death and of ghost and things, and finally, in a tremendously thrilling death scene, when the harrested Adrienne, who has been persunded by the dreadful Duchess that she is poisoned, when she isn't, dies of "suggestion" as one may

La Gr-r-r-ande Sarah, was never gr-r-reater than she was on Tuesday in her own new play. She was splendidly supported, especially by M. de Max as the poor Abbé. M. Gerval as Voltaire, and Madame Dufrene, a handsome young actress, as the wicked Duch-

La Réjane has for her last week at Terry's (finishing to-night) given us highly interesting revivals of La l'assereile (which Marie Tempest did as The Marriage of Kitty) and of Divorcons, which has often been adapted into the British tongue.

Coquelin, Madame Lebianc-Maeterlinck, and Yvette Guilbert have all finished their London seasons and Sarah finishes next week.

The many-theatred manager, George Education in the beautiful and th wardes, has been interviewed by Herbert Vivian (at one time a wild-eyed aristocratic Socialist), and the result has appeared in the Pall Mall Magazine. H. V. describes G. E. as the "Bismarck of the ballet." Also as "premier of the playhouse," which use of what Poet Pope called "Apt Alliteration's Artful Aid" strikes me as being somewhat strained, to put it mildly.

Mr. Edwardes, re a subsidized theatre, expressed himself "with a fine note of contempt" "Why should the already overburdened taxpayer be plundered," he says, "in order to assist actors who have not been able to make a decent living"? Also he defended the ladies of the theatre. "I assure you," he says, "that actresses are quite as moral as, if not more than, any class of we Of course, there is greater ease and familiarity in the theatrical profession, because the sexes are thrown more together. But that is a safeguard and not an incitement to vice." Good old George!

Our next new productions include From the Unseen World, a new supernatural play at Stratford, a few miles down east. The Blue Moon, a new musical play at the Lyric (whe Martin Harvey finishes in about a month), Bernard Shaw's new mock tragedy, Passic and Poison; or, the Fatal Gazolene, and Comyns Carr's new adaptation of "Oliver Twist," to be produced by Beerbohm Tree at His Majesty's next Monday week.

I hear Charles Frohman and Seym Hicks are arranging to build two new theatres in Shaftesbury Avenue, besides the on now being built in Aldwych, next door to the Waldorf. The said Charles and Seymour have also arranged to produce at Christmas at the last named theatre a sacred drama or pas-sion play, to be called The Star of Bethlehem. GAWAIN.

Maid.

Joel P. Carin and his clever Musketeer Four will be featured in the new musical comedy. The Great I Am, next season. Mr. Carin has written several meritorious numbers, and will introduce some novelty songs in the pew comedy.

The Mixon and Zimmerman Opera company, ander the management of Monte Griffo, presented The French Maid at Pleasure Bay last week. Lee Grean Smith, musical director, is responsible for many pleasing interpolations and also for active work of the choruses. The company includes Grace Cameron, Christine Hudson, Walter Lawrence, Jack McSweney, Phil Branson, Florence Hother and others.

Some one asked Nathan Bivins, "The Black cusa," and publisher of several songs, if he ex-cised to "land" a hit this season. He replied at if he could sell three copies a day 365 days the year he could get along without a hit. wins evidently receives money from home.

Christine Hudson, whose pleasing personality of melocitous voice has won favor everywhere, is appear with Babes in Toyland next season, t present she is with the Nixon and Zimmerman

Aifred Bryan and J. B. Mulien have placed ith P. J. Howley a new ballad entitled "Two ittle Girls Loved One Little Boy." The story is complete and the melody by Mullen is pretty are to hit the mark.

The Pilisbury-Dana company is now located their new office at 44 West Twenty-eighth rest, where their new songs will be heard.

m. M. Jerome returned to Chicago last week assist in the production of his new comic a, The Yankee Regent. Mr. Jerome secured ral well-known people while here, who accom-ed him and began rehearsing on their arriva-

The Heidelberg Cadets who were billed as the feature act of Henderson's Music Hail Coney Island for the week of June 19 achieved success with the audiences and are already booked for a long tour over the Orpheum circuit. The singing of the three of Joseph W. Stern & Co.'s songs, including "Good Fellows," 'Oh, Maiden, Thou Hast an Eye of Blue," and "King of the Vikings Am I," elicited great applause and all three of them will be retained as a special feature of the act.

Bianche Ring will continue to feature "My Irish Molly O," the worthy successor to "Be-delia," by Jerome and Schwarts.

Island for the week of June 19 achieved success with the audiences and are already booked for a long tour over the Orpheum circuit. The singing of the three of Joseph W. Stern & Co.'s songs, including "Good Fellows," "Oh, Maiden, Thou Hast an Rye of Blue," and "King of the Vikings and "I," elicited great appiause and all three of them will be retained as a special feature of the act.

The Bootblack Quartette is featuring "Keep a Little Cosy Corner in Your Heart for Me" and "Good-bye, Bis," published by F. B. Haviland Publishing Company.

Ila Grannon in vaudeville is singing "Bright Eyes, Good-bye," and "My Hindoo Man," both published by Jerome H. Remick and Co.

Robert Emmett Lennon writes from Holyoke, Mass, to the effect that he is singing with success "Sing Me the Songs of Dixle Land." by J.

A NEW GERMAN THEATRE.

THE corner-stone of a new German playe to be erected in Philadelphia was aid on July 4, with appropriate cere that included speeches by prominent Ger-mans, who, while absolutely loyal to this country, the land of their adoption, could ar the strong native strain in them that impulsed praise of the theatre and kindred institutions of the fatherland.

The genius of American nationality tends to the elimination of special racial and national tendencies among the complex peo-ple who make up this great country, and similation of all in a mass compara tively homogeneous. There are times whe this process appears to be slow, because of the great influx of elements originally unsympathetic; but it is significant that ner or later the most discordant of se elements seem to unite in the spirit of Americanism, however much adherence to native languages and customs may seem to preserve the individuality of the respec-tive peoples that come here to make homes. It is the newer generations which grow up here in a common educational system that make for the unity of the American spirit, as that spirit dominates.

There are in New York, for instance theatres given over to many tongues, for here there are large colonies of various peoples who by association preserve much of their native individuality; but no doubt in time all that will change, as the English language extends to these peop through the rising generations. Of all the s that have become Americans, how ever, the Germans are the most tenacion of the institutions of the fatherland that come nearest to every-day life, and this is were denied by the High Sheriff, the funcown in their love for and support of entres that give their native plays and the best of other languages in their native tongue. Several of these theatres are scattered about this country, and all of them are a credit to their founders and support-

American theatres in the cities of their location.

One may not agree with the states quoted by Dr. C. J. HEXAMER, one of the He found that a fee was charged for a sent speakers at the corner-stone laying in Philadelphia, as having been made by "an unbiased Anglo-American authority," that "the American stage is 150 years behind that of Germany," and, by the way, no proof in detail was brought forward as to this sweeping declaration; but one may understand, in the present circumstances of the American theatre, the pertinency of Dr. Hexamen's other remarks, in the course of which he said: speakers at the corner-stone laying in Philcourse of which he said:

Course of which he said:

Our undertaking is the tangible protest of many hundreds of men and women against existing conditions, who hunger for better productions on our stage than they can now obtain, who, though many of them are not blessed with worldly riches, are willing to put their hands into their pockets in order to at least show their interest. In Germany the drams has an important cultural mission. The performances enter into and form an important part of the every-day life of the citizen and his family, exerting a powerful moral, educational and refining influence. The German in a town with a population not as large as the German-speaking population of Philadelphia has frequent opportunities of seeing performances of works of high literary value, perfectly interpreted by companies of which every actor is a star, because the constant practice of the numerous stock companies throughout the land supplies a large corps of excellent actors. Thus, the fortunate citizen of a German town, where the playbill is changed almost nightly, will be offered more variety in a month than we can get in a season or seasons by our star system of long runs. An impartial American recently made the statement that an inhabitant of Berlin can witness more performances of the various plays of Shakkespaars in a year than an American can see at home in a lifetime.

Citizens of German birth and descent

Citizens of German birth and descent are usually discriminating persons, for they have been bred to deep philosophy and high achievement in most fields of artistic demonstration. Thus it is easy to understand that in the general offerings of the American theatre they find little to interest them, for they are among the people who do not believe that amusement should who do not believe that amus altogether banish thought. It is natural for them to wish for a theatre in which great dramatic works may be represented, and they should be commended for build-ing such theatres when they find they can-not have them otherwise. In the older theatre days of this country, too, the drama had an important part in everyday life, as it always should have. It may have such a part here again—in which case even those of German descent would probably find little excuse for building theatres to be devoted exclusively to the German language—but when that happy time may come even a prophet would hesitate to say.

AS A POLITICAL INSTRUMENT.

THE employment of the drama as a political instrument is by no means new, although it has seldom or never been succes ful as a direct appeal to political bias. It is remembered that in a recent Presidential campaign there was an attempt, at least tentatively, to further the cause of one of the minor parties—was it not the Populist? —by stage representations that got no fur-ther than "elaborate preparation."

THE MIRROR recently noted the drama called "seditious" that since American occupation of the Philippines has been employed with more or less indirection to inflame the natives of those islands, and particularly those at Manila; and now com news of a dramatic scheme in Hawaii to inflame the Japanese in that territory against the consul for Japan there located because it is alleged, the consul has not been as active in the interests of his compatripts as they think he should have been.

After ineffectual efforts to have this con sul displaced his enemies in Hawaii launched against him plays in which he figured as a generally unlovable, if not, in fact, a very wicked, person. As is well known, there are many Japanese employed in the industries of Hawall, and in these plays their hardships, which by inference might have been either modified or obviated by the consul, are set forth with moving effect. One play deals with the brutal treatment of Japanese laborers, while another pictures the harshness of a Portuguese "foreman," who, inferentially, should have been dealt with by the easygoing consul.

But all has not been plain sailing for the producers of these plays in Honolulu, where tionary who there acts as a censor, on the main ground that the plays were attacks on a friendly power. There are ways of circumventing the censor, however, as has been demonstrated in England and else-where where plays forbidden have been ers, as well as to dramatic art, for they are the homes of fine companies of trained actors, and their repertoires are more dignified and artistic than those of the better success, although the High Sheriff finally brought his wit to bear, in combination ment, with his authority, and shut the theatre after free admission, decided that one in-

PERSONAL

Dusz.—Eleanora Duse was taken suddenly ill July 1, and as a result Shubert's new Waldorf Theatre, London, where she was appearing in The Second Mrs. Tanqueray, was closed. Madame Duse recovered sufficiently to go on Tuesday night, and is quite well again.

BERGEN.—Nella Bergen (Mrs. De Wolf Hopper) has finally succumbed to many tempting offers for vaudeville engagements, and made her debut at the new theatre on the board walk at Asbury Park on Saturday evening last.

HAWTREY.—Charles Hawtrey will return to the United States in October to make another tour of this country in A Message from Mars. The comedy is now running at the Avenue Theatre, London.

POTTER.—Mrs. James Brown Potter presented her own petition in bankruptcy in London the morning of July 7, and the Court appointed a receiver. She lost heavily as the result of recent productions at the Savoy Theatre, and all her personal effects and her hom at Maidenhead were sold last week.

HITCHCOCK.—Raymond Hitchcock is at his Summer cottage at Great Neck, L. I., where he will rest before beginning his season at Wallack's early in August in the new comedy, Easy Dawson.

Townsend.—Charlotte Townsend closed Sunday, June 21, with the Vaughn Glaser Stock Company in Detroit, and will spend three weeks at Great Barrington, Mass., before her opening, August 6, at The Casino in Toledo, in My Wife's Husbands, in which she is to star under J. J. Rosenthal's management.

JANAUSCHEK.-The will of Madame Janauschek has been filed in the Nassau County Surrogate's Court of L. I. She leaves a per-sonal estate of $600, all of which goes to her only daughter, Teresa Zahn of Darmstadt, ARDEN.—Edwin Arden has been engaged by Joseph Brooks for the role of John Selhy in C. T. Dazey's Home Folks.

HACKETT.-James K. Hackett, who is n in London, has engaged by cable Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh for the role of Lady Marchmont, the lovable middle-aged peacemaker, for his production of The Walls of Jericho at the Savoy Theatre next Autumn. Mr. Hackett intends to return from Paris in about two this country has been announced, is now at the Waldorf Theatre, London, with the Henry Russell Grand Opera Company. She will sail for America in October and is to appear here in November for the first time six clusion of her tour in The Singing Girl.

REHAN.—Ada Rehan, who was strick with appendicitis while visiting Lord at Lady Barrington in England, is still ill. No serious result is expected, however, and the Shuberts are busy with arrangements to star her next season in George Bernard Shaw's exposition of his views on womankind, Cap-tain Brassbound's Conversion. Miss Rehan's tour will begin in November.

HOPPER.—De Wolf Hopper will open his season at the Lyric Theatre September 4 in Reginald De Koven and Frederic Ranken's new opera, Elysis

WILLIAMS.—Hattie Williams was out of the cast of The Rollicking Girl for a few performances because of a slight attack of ptomaine poisoning.

Belasco returned last Wednesday from London, and is busy preparing his attractions for the coming season. At Shelter Island Mr. Belasco will finish his new play for Blanche Bates.

SULLIVAN.-Edward J. Sullivan, now with Liebler and Company, has been appointed manager of Madame Bernhardt's American tour, which will also include a limited engage ment in Mexico and Havana.

FROHMAN.—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Prob-man (Margaret Illington) sailed for New York July 8. Mr. Frohman has secured sev-eral new plays, which will be done at the Ly-ceum in the course of the next season or so.

"Punch" Wheeler, who is the managing ows, apparently having gent of the Floto Sh rmanently cast his fortunes with the tents, rites characteristically from Denver: "Exse my delay in writing. A heavy rain in ed all the stripes off the show's as, and I had to run back and paint them gain. A hotel man threatened to sue us ghty-six meals he said had been coned for; so we sent over eighty-six canvas-who are so much before they were half fied that the man offered to give the show his hotel if we would call them off. He is now bankrupt, and an elephant is shoving the hotel down to the show's Winter quarters. I send my picture, which I got in the paper while the editor was away fishing. Wish you'd print it in your Wanted column. I would like to be the first agent in that column who doesn't want anything. P. S.—The calliope player to-day was arrested for disorderly conduct. While enlarging on a very fine Hungarian goulash rhapsody he frightened a gasoline automobile into exploding. The night clerk of one of the hotels we stopped at rapped on the door of the clown's room and told him his gas was leaking. 'All right,' replied the funny man, 'I'll put a bucket under it.' A farmer asked for two reserved seats 'in front of the performing seals.' As the circus ticket sellers never overlook anything, they sold him two seats in front of a Swede with a sealskin vest The portrait referred to by Mr. Wheeler shows him in a graceful pose in a chair not unlike those occupied by United States Senators at Washington. Mr. Wheeler's hair continues to disappear; but this is no misfortune, for it the more clearly discloses a remarkable head.

A remarkable tribute was paid to the late Jefferson in a four-column, double Joseph Jefferson in a toli-Journal by the editor of that newspaper, Henry Watterson, who had been a lifelong friend of the dead player. Mr. Watterson in this article detailed an interesting experience ving notable men as follows:

Mr. Jeffersonian was a Swedenborgian in his Mr. Jeffersonian was a Swedenborgian in his religious faith. At one time too extreme a belief in spiritualism threatened to cloud his sound, wholsome understanding. As he grew older and happier, and passed out from the shadow of his early tragedy, he fell away from the more sinister indusence the supernatural had attained over his imagination. Once in Washington I had him to breakfast to meet the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Matthews and Mr. Carlisle, the but newly elected Speaker of the House. It was a rainy senday, and it was in my mind to warn him that our company was made up of hard-headed lawyers not apt to be impressed by fairy tales and ghost copy had as yet been discovered. It was made up of hard-headed lawyers our company was made up of hard-headed lawyers our company was made up of hard-headed lawyers out to be impressed by fairy tales and ghost forces, and to suggest that he cut the spiritual-tories, and to suggest that he cut the spiritual-tories, and to suggest that he cut the spiritual-tories, and to suggest that he cut the spiritual-tories in case the conversation fell, as was likely. The special complete works several of his bareas, and to suggest that he cut the spiritual-tories had been published, notably Titus dramas had been publ finally the Chief Justice, Mr. Waite, related a of incidents so fantastic and incredible, tailed with the precision and lucidity of a master of plain statement, as fairly to stagger the most believing ghost-seer. Then I said to myself again: "Let her go, Joe, no matter what you tell now, you will fall below the standard set by these professional perfectors of pure reason and are seen and are seen to be a court heat, or your worst." son, and are safe to do your best, or your worst."

I think he held his own, however.

Mr. Watterson states in the course of his article that Mr. Jefferson "carried a pens nts aggregating thirty or forty susand dollars a year, for more than a the fact that the fortune left by Mr. Jefferson was much smaller than it was com ught to be. Even at this late day Mr. Wata's estimate of his friend as an actor and n is worth reproducing:

Shakespeare was his Bible. The stage had seen his craftle. He continued all his days a stu-ten his craftle. He continued all his days a stu-ent. In him met the meditative and the ob-erving faculties. In his love of fishing, his love The stage had of painting, his love of music, we see the brood-ing, contemplative spirit joined to the alert in mental force and foresight when he addressed himself to the activities and the objectives of himself to the activities and the objectives of the theatre. He was a thorough stage-manager, skillful, patient and upright. His company was skillful, patient and upright. His company was skillful, patient and upright. His company was and grandchildren he ultimately drew about him than he had been with the young men and young women who had preceded them in his employment and instruction. He was not ashamed of his calling, but proud of it. His mother had lived and died an actress. He preferred that his progeny should follow in the footsteps of their forbears even as he had done. It is beside the purpose to inquire, as does the London Telegraph, what he higher flights of tragedy; whether he could have rendlered the passion of Lear; one might as well dis-

cuse the relation of a Dickens to a Shakespeare. Sir Henry Irving and Sir Charles Wyndham, in England, M. Coquelin, in France, each has his metier. They are perfect in their art. and unalike in their art. No comparison between them can be justly drawn, or will hold water. I was witness to the rise of all three of them, and have followed them in their greatest parts throughout their most brilliant and most eminent and successful careers. So with Mr. Jefferson. More than King can no man be than King can no man be-

Whether he rules in Ovprus, or in Dres. There shall be Kings of Thule after these are gone; the actor dies and leaves no copy; his deeds gone; the actor dies and leaves no copy; his deeds are writ in water, only his name survives in Tradition's tongue, and yet, from Betterton and Garrick to Irving, from Macklin and Quinn to Wyndham and Jefferson, how few!

Mr. Watterson, who is still a power in jour-

Mr. Watterson, who is still a power in jour-nalism, has been a friend of the more prom-inent actors for a very long period. He it was, THE MIRROR believes, that "discovered" the dramatic talent of Mary Anderson (now Mrs. de Navarro), and he was instrumental in introducing her to the public.

A novel decision in a somewhat unu marital case was made the other day in this city by Justice McCall, of the Supreme Court.

A woman had sued her husband for separation, one of her principal charges against him being that he would not take her to the theatre or accompany her to other places of amusement. According to the husband's contention, he was a very busy man, working not only all day, but frequently during the even-

The justice held that in the case of a hardworking man it is unreasonable to expect that he shall accompany his wife to the theatre or other places of amusement, the theory evi-dently being that such a man is entitled to spend his leisure in rest.

This case by suggestion brings up the fact that women are the more numerous supporters of theatres and other amusements. Often it is difficult for women to induce husbands who have leisure to attend the theatre, and the average audience will show a prepor ance of women.

A Western newspaper friend recently sent to THE MIRROR a clipping from a rural Wis-consin journal that contained important news

It stated that the theatregoers of a ren town would be pleased to learn that the local manager had "succeeded in securing" the remanager had "succeeded in securing" the re-turn of "Walter Fane and company in their new play, Trapped by Treachery." This was announced as "a sensational comedy-drama written expressly for Mr. Fane by the emi-nent dramatist, Clyde Fitch." The play was described as one "filled with comic and dra-matic situations," and a carload of new scenery, it was said, would be used in its representation. There were to be vaudeville specialties between the acts, and admission ranged from 25 cents upward.

But really there is perhaps no one that would be more interested in Trapped by Treachery than Clyde Fitch, unless it might be Theodore Kremer.

A citizen of Malmo, Sweden, has placed in the hands of the librarian of that city an ancient copy of Shakespeare's Titus Andi Under the close scrutiny of C. Linng gren, the librarian, it was discovered that the copy in question had been printed in London in 1594 and had formed part of an edition which Shakespeare students had long ago surmised to have been issued, but of which no copy had as yet been discovered. It was well known that previous to the first edition of Shakespeare's complete works several of his dramas had been published, notably Titus performance to be given in the aid of Hobart Bosworth at the California Theatre, San Florence Rob Francisco, on next Friday, July 14. Mr. Bosworth, who supported Miss Roberts last eason, is now ill of consumption and unable to further pursue his work. LICENSES FOR THEATRICAL AGENCIES.

By a decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, rendered last week, about 500 theatrical agents in New York City will have to take out employment agency licenses, and will be subject to supervision of the License Board. One result of the decision will be to prevent agents from charging for booking more than the maximum fee of $2. The decision is the result of a test case brought against James J. Armstrong, who was arrested in order that the status of theatrical agents under the employment agency law might be definitely decided.

CAMPBELL AND IRVING?

The cable announces that Mrs. Patrick Campbell and young H. B. Irving are to join forces and tour England as co-stars. This new combination will prevent Mrs. Campbell's tour of America next season, but it is said to be settled that she and Mr. Irving will come to the United States in the year following.

The Nayor of Tokio Improves-Hippodrome and Other Hopes-Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CHICAGO, July 10. The bills this week: Chicago Opera House, Land of Nod: Powers', Mrs. Temple's Telegram; Grand Opera House, It Happened in Nordland; Garrick, The Woggle Bug; Illinois, Little Johnny Jones: Studebaker, Mayor of Tokio: Great Northern, Buster Brown; Bijou, stock in Tracy the Outlaw.

Richard Carle has greatly improved The Mayor of Tokio since the opening night, and it is running along smoothly to good houses at the Studebaker. His new song, "Cruising Home," which he sings with Edward Garvie and William Rock, and embellishes with a dance, is founded on a bright idea but lacks the musical excellence it should have. The chorus, at least, should be much more melo-dious and original. Carle is embellishing his part with many good lines and much effective busi-ness and gets about all the encores he should crave, especially with "Foolishness," which has the requisite odd music and the expected Carleosoic comedy. Mr. Garvie has made the Mayor as good as he looks and the make-up is a hit. The improvement is much to Mr. Garvie's credit as a comedian. He is not satisfied with the ordinary dough of low comedy. The Russian apy is suppressed about down to the point where it is most effective. Ennma Janvier is steadily gaining admirers with her thorough and inimitable depiction of the wardrobe lady that "has been," and who is sorry when she finds herself stranded in far-away Australia that she never learned to first. An improvement has been foat. An immense improvement has bee de in the chorus and every number is pleas

The keen knife of retrenchment if not the swift blade of reform is being applied at The Tyrolean Alps, where there is a serious fall-ing off in attendance since the Fourth of July, when the place was filled to overflowing by eight thousand school children brought thither by the St. Louis Star-Chronicle. The youngsters had the time of their lives. Charles P. Strine, late of the advance of the Conried Opera company and to be in advance of Sarah Bernhardt next season, is to be general nanager. The orchestra now numbers only ome thirty-two, but that makes no difference, because John Lund is approaching the brass band style of orchestrating more and more. At that the expenses of the big place are of three-ring circus size and variety. Everybody who has been up against the proposition in the theatrical business of "expenses and nothin' doin'," knows how they feel about this time in the chilly Alps. Miss Katherine Sherwood the chilly Alpa. Miss Katherine Sherwood concluded an engagement abounding in much artistic success, and to-night Madame Jessie Liddell-Harkrader, a pupil of Stefani, of Brooklyn, and the wife of a once well-known local newspaperman, is the soloist. Madame Liddell-Harkrader is rated a messo-contralto, a classification never hereinbefore employed. But why not messo-contraito after messo-soprano? Music is a consistent art, or should be, even the music of the Summer garden. I pe business will pick up, or some of us of the male persuasion will sing memo-basso. Madame Liddell-Harkrader is of striking stage presence, and her singing of the usual Saint Saens, Biset, and De Koven scores is very ac-ceptable. But even if business does not pick ceptable. But even if business does not pick up at the Alps and the chilly nights continue we are to have Colonel William Jennings Bryan with us on the night of July 20, wh the French will fête in true Franco-American style. Yesterday for the first time in over twelve years the St. Louis Star failed to issue a day edition. Under the new Star-Chronirégime the Sunday issue is permanently ned. Hereafter the paper will make its supreme effort on Saturday, printing a illustrated edition. The change is welme from many standpoints; first, because the Sunday mammoth newspaper has begun to outlive its usefulness, especially when it is the addendum, the vermiform appendix, as it were, to an afternoon sheet.

Summer Quiet Reigns-Stock News-Vaudeville Attracts-Plans.

(Special to The Mirror.)

PHILADELPHIA, July 10. This is one of the quietest cities in the United States during the Summer months. Our manager are all out of town; this accounts for the scarcity of theatrical news.

The corner-stone of the German Theatre at Franklin Street and Girard Avenue was laid with appropriate ceremonies July 4. It will be completed by February, and devoted to first-class stock productions.

The Casino (late Auditorium), last seas under the management of Elias, Koenig and Lederer, has again changed hands, a bur-lesque syndicate, under the title of Columbia Amusement Company, taking the control and adding it to their chain of theatres. It will be devoted entirely to burlesque next season, but announced as musical extravagansas.

Keith's New Theatre attractions this week include Maud Harrison, Cheridah Sin Cnarlie Case, Willie and Edith Hart, John e Nici Dave Nowlin. Four Livingstons, Burton's dogs, Maxemith Duo, Carolyn Young, whistler; Nate Leipzig, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hayman, biograp Williams and Walker Glee Club, who are fifteen colored vocalists late of In Dahomey.

The Lyceum Theatre continues open with stock features under the title of Brooklyn Beauties, principally a "girl show," with two burlesques. John Conley, James Fulton, Kelly and Sindic, Simpson, stone breaker; Miss Nelson, Lillie Jane, Gussie Lang, the principal olio features. The night patron continues fair.

At the Parks: Willow Grove, Conway's Ithaca Band; Woodside, Grenadier Guards Band; Chestnut Hill, Lambiase Band; Wash-ington Park, Roman Imperial Band; Lincoln, American Band.

The proposed "wheel" scheme for the various stock organizations has been aband for the coming season. Several man changing their views and the failure to obtain a Pittsburgh bouse are the main causes for this final action. This city will have two strong stock companies for the coming sensor Forepaugh's and the Standard.

During the past week an agreement was made whereby Manager R. M. Gulick, of the Bijou, will have the management of the Alvin for the coming season, at which house the best musical productions and comedies are now being booked. It will be a popular-priced house and will open on August 21 with Eva Tanguay in The Sambo Girl.

The Gayety will be a burlesque house this oming season and will open the latter part

The Bijou will be the first playhouse to begin the new season, as usual, and will open on the 31st of this month with How Hearts Are Broken.

Luna Park will have Fairman's Bost Concert Band this week, and Adgie and her lions and Hardy the high wire walker will be retained for this week.

Tunis F. Dean, former business repre sentative for Harry Davis, is now acting in a like capacity at Luna Park.

Summer Stock Successful-Pauline Chase Family-Elks Leave. (Special to The Mirror.)

WASHINGTON, July 10.

The ninth and concluding week of the very successful season of the Columbia Theatre company commenced to-night to a crowded house, when this popular organization ented Madeleine Lucette Ryley's delightful comedy, The Mysterious Mr. Bugle, the play that first introduced Annie Russell in a stellar role, with popular Joseph M. Holland as leading support. It had its premiere here at this theatre April 5, 1897, and has never had a local representation since. Guy Standing and Charlotte Walker, who have had the dis tinction of being featured by Manager Joseph E. Luckett as stars in connection with this capable organization during the season, pre-sented the leading roles in admirable fashion, excellent advantage. The season generally has been a series of surprising weeks of in-door theatrical conditions that have been altogether pleasurable.

In this paragraph I uplift the veil of mysding the identity of Paulin tery surroun Chase, the pink pajama girl of the original Liberty Belles, who has so rapidly advanced in her chosen profession as to be the sele as leading lady to the English star, Eller Terry. JANET WALDORF.

Above is an excellent likeness of that talented actress, Janet Waldorf, who has the distinction of being the only American actress that has made the tour of the world as a star three years consecutively. Her repertoire, consisting of Shakespeare and the classic drama, gave full scope to Miss Waldorf's ability and versatility in comedy and tragedy. Among Miss Waldorf's successful productions may be mentioned Romeo and Juliet, Twelfth Night, The Lady of Lyons, Taming of the Shrew, Winter's Tale, The Hunchback, Much Ado About Nothing, The School for Scanda Ingomar, Pygmalion and Galatea, Gwynne, Camille, A Royal Divorce, Magda and other well-known plays. Miss Waldorf was Donna Roma last season in Hall Caine's The Eternal City, she having been brought from Bombay, India, by Liebler and Company to succeed Viola Allen in the part. The critics everywhere the company appeared were un-stinted in their commendation of Miss Wal-dorf's interpretation of the exacting role of Donna Roma, and called especial attention to her well modulated and musical voice and perfect enunciation. During Miss Waldorf's travels in Oriental countries she has been enabled to gather an interesting and valuable collection of rare souvenirs, representing every place she visited. Some of those highly prized are from Shanghai, Calcutta, Ho Kong, Bombay, India, Yokohama, New Zealand, Melbourne, Sydney, Honolulu and Manila. Miss Waldorf's well kept diary and book, containing the vast colle views taken by her camera, is prolific of valu able and interesting data of far away places. Famous Musician Dead-Nance O'Neil Arrives -Theatrica! Austness Grows Lively. (Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

SYDNEY, June 12.

In my last advice to you I recorded the seriaron, for so many ears the conductor of J. C. Williamson's Comic Opera company. My letter was hardly mailed when I received news of his death, which took place in Sydney on May 29. The deceased musician was born at Boulogne-sur-Mer in 1850 and studied his art under the well-known organist Alexander Guilmant. His studies at the Paris Conservatoire were broken into by the Franco-German war, and, going over to London, he for twelve months was a first violin in Riviere's Orchestra at the Alhambra. Following this engagement he went over to America and stayed with Theo-dore Thomas' Orchestra until its disbandment in 1876, and in that same year made his Australian bow as conductor of Lyster's Grand Italian Opera company at the old Melbourn Opera House. In 1880 he won the 100 guines prize at the Melbourne International Exhibi-tion for his cantata Victoria, which was dered by 1,000 voices supported by an or-stra numbering 125. Notable among first stralian productions under his baton were see of Carmen, Mignon and Fra Diavolo. leaves a widow and daughter surviving He leaves a widow and daughter surviving him, and, unlike many connected with his profession, he died a comparatively well-to-do man. J. C. Williamson has engaged August Juneer, the composer of "I Was Dreaming," and who for the past few years has been conducting musical organisations in the American States under the management of Charles Frohman and others, to fill the position rendered vacant by Leon Caron's death.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Lewis were recently the recipients of a benefit in Melbourne, given under the agis of J. C. Williamson. The veteran actor, whose name will be familiar to many on your side, is now in his eighty-eighth year.

B. M. S. Sierra, which arrived here rom Frisco on Saturday last, Nance O'Neil nd McKee Rankin returned to Australia, McKee Rankin returned to Australia, are they are to play an eight weeks' Melrae season, followed by one of seven weeks Sydney. The Melbourne season opens on urday next with Magda, a piece which red a great success during Miss O'Neil's Australian visit. Included in the supting company are Mrs. Henry Bracy, alty well known here; Margaret Bloodgood, a Marbury, Andrew Robson, John Glensing, George Friend and Stage-Manager seasn. Her repertoire includes The Fires It. John, Justice, Sardou's Sorceress, Mon-Vanna, and Judith, all of which are new to tralia, as well as many plays already seen his country.

A matinee performance in aid of the Children's Hospital, given on Saturday last by Williamson's Opgra company, netted £250 for that charity. The tuneful Cingales was the chief draw. Alexin Bassian, a member of this company and well known to American players, is, I regret to say, on the sick list, and her part as Lady Versker is now being taken by Nellie Wilson. Rose Musgrove is still down with typhoid and causing her friends some anxiety, her recovery not being as rapid as might be. Julius Knight, who is laid up with the same fever, is now approaching convalences.

The Maud Jeffries season at the Royal is awing to a close and will be concluded on me 28 with a revival of Lytton's Lady of yons. The Sign of the Cross is the present it, and will on Wednesday be changed to ygmalion and Galates, with Maud Jeffries at Harry Plinsser in the title-roles. Moneur Beaucaire will in turn succeed this play at interest in its production will be added to the fact that J. B. N. Osborne (Maud ffries' husband) will appear in the nameurit.

William Anderson's company at the Palace has mot with fair success with the melodrama, Two Little Drummer Boys, which on next Saturday will be supplanted by the ever-green and weepful East Lynne.

Lovers of the vandeville and variety continue to be well entered for by Harry Rickards company at the Tivoli and Frank Clark's Folly company at the Queen's Hall.

John F. Sheridan (Widow O'Brien) is back at the Criterion, where his present season opened ampiciously on Saturday night. King Dodo, a musical absurdity, which serves its purpose well—namely, to present opportunities for the clover company with which Sheridan has surrounded himself to show off its shillties to best advantage. The company includes Maud Amber, Hebn Barlow, D'Allan Clarke, Rupert Julian, Thomas Curran, Little Guiliver, Heloise Austa, and George Tutton.

Edward Branacombe's Westminster Glee

Edward Branacombe's Westminster Glee Singers returned to Sydney last week, and on Saturday commenced a brief season at the Town Hall, and judging by the reception the mpany received its present season will see as successful as its last in Sydney.

Stephenson's company has moved Bill Adams from the Sydney Criterion to the Melbourne Princess, and advices state that the said Bill Adams stood the journey well and was welcomed on Saturday by a large and appreciative house.

Bland Holt is at the Melbourne Royal with Sporting Life, Sandford's company at the Bijou with The Power of Gold, and Andrew Mack at Her Majesty's with Tom Moore. The last named play and players are due in Sydney on Saturday next, when they will make their joint bow at Her Majesty's The-E. NEWTON DALY.

SYDNEY, May 8. Theatrical matters in the New South Wales provinces continue dull, the metropolitan amusements absorbing the attention of country folk during the Easter holiday season.

In Sydney, the Lyceum, which was lately purchased for religious purposes, is likely to prove a kind of white elephant to its proprietor, a wealthy octogenarian who has just married a second wife, a young lady with ex-pensive philanthropic tastes.

The fate of the Lyceum has completely altered all George Musgrove's arrangements and given fresh impetus to the proposal for the construction of a new theatre, having frontages to three leading thoroughfares, at cost of about £25,000.

With a view to forcing Sydney managers to open their doors earlier, the City Council has declared the queue system illegal, and are prosecuting playgoers for loitering on the pavements. It is proposed to meet the difficulty by opening the doors as desired, but having two sales of admission to the cheaper parts of the house, each of which will be railed off into two divisions. off into two divisions.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Everybody is glad to learn that Robert Brough is recovering from the serious illness which prevented his appearance on the opening night of the Brough-Flemmay season at Perth. The change in the cast necessitated by Mr. Brough's illness led to some unintentionally amusing situations, from one or two by Mr. Brough structions, from one or two of the actors having to read their parts on the stage. The audience, however, took everything in good part, Beauty and the Beast taking their fancy immensely. It was, however, followed speedily by The Walls of Jericho, which has proved a success.

NEW ZEALAND.

Nellie Stewart May Tour America—Vandevi In Plenty-Gr

WELLINGTON, May 31. George Musgrove, who left by the Sonor George Mungrove, who left by the Sonoma last month on a business trip to America, is expected back in New Zealand before the Auckland senson of his dramatic company is finished. If such is the case he would only have about ten days to get to New York to transact his business and be back in San Francisco, which, I should think, would be well nigh impossible. Rumor says that his mission is to try and arrange an American tour for Nellie Stewart, who is universally known as "Australia's Nellie."

known as "Australia's Nellie."

The Fuller Proprietary are doing excellent business at their four vaudeville houses. They have no stellar attractions at any of their theatres at present, but the people that are in the bills are of more than average ability.

The New Zealand tour of Harry Rickards' All Star Vaudeville company was not by any means a financial success. In fact, the enterprising Harry is so disgusted over the treatment he receives from our theatreporers that ment he receives from our theatregoers that he has decided not to send any more com-panies on a tour of New Zealand. The company was an exceedingly strong one and included George Fuller Golden, O'Meers Sisters, Historicus (a nine-year-old wonder, described as the human encyclopedia); Fred. W. Millis, ventriloquist, and the Frasettia, musical act, ventriloquist, and the Frasettis, musical act, besides a few smaller turns.

J. C. Williamson's Dramatic company, which is headed by the talented American actress, Tittel Brune, will inaugurate a New Zealand tour at the Wellington Opera House on June 14. The opening piece will be Rostand's L'Aiglon, which will be followed by Sunday, Romeo and Juliet, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray and probably Zaza. The company which supports Miss Brune is an exceedingly strong one, and I predict the tour will be a great success.

The Fullers were willing to give Little Tich £200 a week for a four weeks' tour of their circuit, but, owing to his having to get back to England to fulfill engagements al-ready entered into, New Zealand was not included in his tour. He left Sydney for Marseilles on May 27.

The Bicknells, the American whirldwind dancers, are appearing with P. R. Dix's Gaiety Company at the Wellington Royal in the American novelty, Money.

The North Island tour of George Musgrove's Dramatic Company is panning out very successfully, both from a financial and artistic standpoint. The closing nights of the Wellington season were devoted to the produc-tion of Pretty Peggy and Blind Man's Buff; or, Her Own Way. I am certain that if the last named piece had been presented earlier in the season standing room would have been at a discount, and that it could easily have run six nights. The overland tour to Auckland

The Black Family of Musiciana, after a successful twelve months' tour of New Zealand, leave on July 12 for a holiday among the South Sea Islands. They will give entertainments in several of the larger townships. Montgomery's Entertainers are now touring the South Islands.

The New Zealand tour of J. C. William.

The New Zealand tour of J. C. William-son's Bio-Tableau was the most successful of any picture show that has visited the colony

The South Island tour of the Brescian Singers and Orchestra and West's Pictures has been nothing short of a triumph. They have own to capacity business in every city and town where they have appeared.

The subject of the above portrait, Gertrude Dion Magill, is a leading woman of unusual versatility, possessing youth, grace and beauty, and has played everything from leads to soubrettes with equal facility. She has a good singing voice and is a graceful dancer. She has been on the stage since childhood, receiving her early training from such actors as Frederick Warde, William H. Crane, the late Joseph Jefferson, Thomas W. Kaene and others. Miss Magill has been remarkably successful with stock companies in New Bedford, Pawtucket, and Philadelphia, and is at present stock star of the Buffinton Stock and is at present stock star of the Buffinton Stock company, Pail River, Mass., the only stock com-pany, by the way, ever known to be successful in Pail River, being now in its tweifth week.

At Edgewood Park, in the Thousand Islands, beginning July 29, a series of open-air operatic performances will be given under the direction of James W. Morrissey, similar to those given in Saratoga several years ago. Scenes from Carmen, Faust, Rigoletto, Martha and Romeo and Juliet will be presented. The singers will include many of the soloists heard at the Victor Herbert concerts last Winter, headed by Madame Lillian Guerlina, former prima donna at the Brussels Opera House. It is planned to repeat the performances in Newport, Saratoga and Lake Georga.

at Hotel Brant.

On the morning of June 26 he took the car over to her place, and after an interview with Miss Knott it was decided that she and her brother-in-law, Thomas Knott, should row Mr. Shipman back to the Brant House. They took a boat and got out into about twenty-five feet of water, when in trying to rearrange the tiller ropes Miss Knott's feet became tangled in a waterproof covering which she had thrown over her to protect her from the splash of the waves. She lost her balance, and in a moment the boat upset and all three were in the water. A heavy sea was running and Messrs. Shipman and Knott found it impossible to right the boat. They supported her for a while, and then it was decided that Mr. Knott should swim ashore for aid. After he had struck out a great wave hit the boat and rolled it completely over, engulfing Miss Knott. Mr. Shipman got hold of her by the hair and drew her from under the boat. Seeing that the boat could not be depended upon to keep them affoat, he decided to try to swim ashore with her. This he succeeded in doing, but they were barely able to crawl along the beach when they reached it.

Mrs. Claire Beecher Kummer has signed a contract with Henry W. Savage by which she is to write an opera for him each year for three years. Her comic opera entitled Noah's Ark is to be completed by Oct. I. and will be produced early in the season. The first act is finished and the other two will be completed at Narragansett Pler, where Mrs. Kummer is the guest of Mrs. William Sprague for the Summer. Mrs. Kummer is a grandniece of the late Henry Ward Beecher. She wrote an opera which was successfully produced in London four years ago. She is also the author of several popular songs that have been heard in Broadway musical plays this season. She writes both the words and the music of her operas.

PRESS COMMENT.

Thoroughly Tired of the Trust.

(Portsmouth, N. R., Herald.)

The entire body politic is praying that the Theatrical Trust will be completely destroyed. This combination of managers is at present undergoing a scathing and searching investigation in the courts of New York, and the wish is general that it may be smanned to smithereens. The people who go to the theatre are thoroughly liked of the Trust and its methods, and the mooner its strangthold on the theatrical busilionsemed the dramale art of the country is loosened the administed or the theatrical busilionsemed the configuration of the continuance of Trust cannot be dramale art of the country is loosened the early demine of the manager and the early demine of the manager and the heatrical polary in the continuance of Trust and its methods, and the will always be the atrical por playwights can long endure existing conditions. To be sure, there will always be theatrical performances, but unless the Trust is brought to terms they will in evitably drop to a dead level of mediocrity or worse. Independent managers with some regard for the sat of the drama cannot meet cannot be dissociated from the theatre. (Koness City Journal.)

Spurred by greed the Theatrical Syndicates have made the public their lemon, and not only are they squeesing from it annually millions of dollars tribute, but they have brought the amusement business to its lowest obtained the corporate abuses in this country none, perhaps, more directly reaches the individual than the treuts that control all branches of public entertainment enterprises. In this department of our national life "syndicatism" has almost become the cupidous finality. Baleful as in the mere commercial aspect of theatrical centralisation, its greatest evil is the prostitution of dramatic art and conscienceiess catering to what is low, morbid and vicious in humanity. The public has heard frequently during recent years complaints from actors and actresses of talent and character who made heroic although futile attempts to "buck the Syndicate." These actors were brave and conscientious, placing their art above vuigar commercialism, and vainty seeking to stem the fetid tide of "box office" management. They tried in their individual ways, and later by counter association, to preserve the vithout exception they finally yielded to the Inevitable and became mere employees of the Trusts.

VICTOR MAPES REPLIES TO M. SARDOU.

Parts, June 22, 1905.

Sir.—I have just read in the New York newspapers a so-called prospectus of a dramatic association which is about to be founded for the representation of French plays only in the United States, under the direction of Victor Mapes. I read to my astonishment among the subscribers the name of James II. Hyde, who I think can hardly be aware of the role he is made to play in this farce. I have heard of this enterprise from two individuals whose names, by the way, are not among the subscribers. I thought the whole matter so trivial that I did not accord them a second interview. I feel, now that I have read the prospectus, that I acted wisely. I quote as follows:

"The Society of French Dramatic Authors has given the association authority to play the plays of French authors in this country for the consideration of one per cent. of the gross receipts as authors' royalties. French plays only will be represented, and the contracts have been drawn up by Frederic Condert, who is also a stockholder in the company."

The Society of French Dramatic Authors has never given any such authority and has signed no contract with this association, for the very good reason that its rules give it neither the right nor the power to sign anything, as the authors have the sole power to place their plays when and where they please. So that this statement is false from beginning to end. As for the one per cent. royalities to be paid for the representation of French plays, who, I wonder, could believe that any French dramatic author worthy of the name would accept such ridiculous terms.

Please warn your compatriots against this enterprise, the nature of whose statement shows very plainly just how worthy it is of their confidence.

My heat wishes.

THE INTERNATIONAL THEATRE COMPANY,

THE INTERNATIONAL THRATER COMPANY,
NEW YORK, July 2, 1906.

To the Biliter of The Dramatic Mirror:

Sir.—A letter signed by M. Sardon, in which my name is mentioned in connection with a "dramatic association" was published in some of the papers this morning, and has doubtless been sent to The Mirror.

In his letter M. Sardon quotes from a "socalled prospectus" which he has "just read in the New York newspapers."

I think it is only fair to call your attention to the fact that the "so-called prospectus" was in reality a whoily unauthorized and very inaccurate newspaper article which appeared about two mouths ago in one of the New York papers. The statements contained therein could only have been the result of guesswork and ignorance applied to some rumor then in circulation, for which no one connected with the "dramatic association" is in any way responsible.

None of the statements referred to by M. Sardou was ever in any "prospectus" or otherwise authorized in any way by the "association."

J. H. Hyde has never had any connection with our enterprise; we have never thought of altempting to make any agreement with the Society of French Dramatic Authors, and the terms, as quoted, have not the slightest basis in fact.

At the time the newspaper article in question was published we were not prepared to make any announcement of our enterprise, and we did not feel called upon to take notice of any idle misstatements which might appear without a sembiance of authority.

When we are ready to make public the plans and scope of our organisation we shall do so in the proper way.

As regards French authors, it may be said that we have had negotiations and signed contracts with a number of them on terms which are mutually astisfactory, but that is quite another matter from the statements referred to.

Yours truly.

Vicyon Mapes.

Hundreds of letters reach as every year, written, in many cases, under the impression that this dinary correspondence school, many of which schools sim, apparently, at giving the smallest pount of information, on any and every possible and impossible subject, for the smallest in, to the greatest possible number of people. This school is an institution, and not a commercial it. It shads however, that it can give what such schools give, and much more, without disturbatem. The FIRST FIFTY-RIGHT EXERCISES constitute a COMPLETE COURSE in themselved to to make the school more widely understood, these sheets will be supplied, at one sending in DILARE. They are an indispensable suppliement to "The Technique of the Drama," faret put years ago. They are a systematized method of analysis and application of the principles, and in no books. For the first time you will get lote the workshop of the dramatist. Circular.
